Model Power is a family owned and operated company that, for over 40 years, has taken pride in its engineering of exact, prototype quality products. We offer a complete line of model railroading products in HO and N scale, as well as accessories and scenics in O/O-27 and G scale.

In recent years, we have taken our expertise and applied it to expanding our product line. We now have an extensive line of HO & G scale trucks, a rapidly growing die-cast airplane line, and most recently, a die-cast HO scale car line.

MODEL POWER, MANTUA AND POSTAGE STAMP PLANES ARE REGISTERED TRADEMARKS OF ATI MODEL PRODUCTS, INC.

HERES SOME USEFUL INFORMATION TO HELP YOU GET STARTED.

SCALE AND GAUGE

1/87 SCALE (HO) & 1/45-48 (O)

Why is it called "HO"? This is because the gauge of the track, or the distance between the rails from inside to inside is 16.5mm. Before HO, the world's most popular scale, there was O scale. O scale is approximately 1:45 or 32mm between rails. HO stands for half or H (H stands for half of O) Scale. Thus HO scale. The size of trackage in HO scale allows one to create a layout of 2/3 smaller than the same layout would be in O scale, thus permitting a reasonable layout in less space.

1/160 (N)

Why is it called "N"? This is because the gauge of the track, or the distance between the rails measured from inside to inside, is 9 mm, and since the word nine begins with an "N", in all major languages, it was decided to adopt it as the symbol for this size. The gauge of real track is 4' 8.5", so to get the gauge in the smaller size we divide 4' 8.5" by 160, getting 9 mm. Since the size was originated in Europe all measurements are usually in millimeters, though in U.S. Terms the gauge would be 355" instead. The size of trackage in N scale allows one to create a layout 2/3 smaller than the same would be in HO scale, thus permitting a reasonable layout in less space.

TRACKAGE

Standard straight track measures 9" and curved track has an 18" radius – 30 degrees, (12 curved to a circle). All American manufacturers' trackage will match, but in some cases quality doesn't. Model Power uses Garnet track from Italy. The quality of plastic and virgin metals of nickel silver, brass or steel track is unmatched. With Model Power track, you are assured proper fit and superior conductivity. Please note: sectional track is easier to work with in creating a layout and can easily be changed if you decide to alter your original designs. Flexible tracks (36" long) are available for those who wish to create their own patterns, but using it should be done carefully; as the more you bend the track section, the more uneven the rails become at the ends. This will require that the uneven ends be sawed off in order for other sections to match up. Please note also that switch controllers operate from your AC tap offs on transformers. By sliding the switch controller side to side and pushing down and releasing (do not hold) your Model Power switches should last a long time. Switches are easy to install and create fun on your railroad layout.

While the curved sections of track may differ from manufacturer to manufacturer, most N scale sectional track is also interchangeable. Sectional tracks are the easiest to work with in creating a layout and can easily be changed if you decided to alter your original designs. Flexible rail sections (usually 29" long) are available for those who wish to create their own patterns, but using it should be done carefully; as the more you bend the section the more uneven the rails ends become. This will require that the uneven endings will have to be sawed off in order for the sections to match up.

ELECTRICAL NOTES

Your engines operate from D.C. only. In order to reverse the direction of your train, it is only necessary to change the direction of the flow of the D.C. current by means of a switch on your power pack. Never connect your rails to the A.C. outlets. This will burn out the motors in your engines; as they are not made for operation on alternating current. When you are not actually operating your trains, it is important that you unplug the power pack until the next time you wish to make use of your set. Otherwise, the pack will heat up and burn out eventually. Also, watch in creating grades that you do not make them too steep. You will put a strain on the motors and reduce their efficiency and possibly even burn them out.

COUPLERS

All couplers on ready-to-run equipment are interchangeable with those of any other make- the exception being a hobbyist type which will not operate with the standard HO scale couplers. These couplers are simple to operate. It is only necessary to bump two couplers together and they will lock. Uncoupling track sections are made in order to allow easy uncoupling of equipment, which is accomplished by the raising of a ramp which permits the couplers to disengage, even from the distance. The couplers are sturdily made and with proper treatment will stand a lot of punishment in continuous use.

MAINTENANCE

Always keep your rails clean, as this is the method by which your motor picks up current. If the rails are dirty, the flow of current is reduced until you are not able to move the train at all. Also keep the wheels of engines and rolling stock clean for the same reasons. Engines should be carefully lubricated every so often – and the more you operate the more you should do this. However, be sure that you do not over-oil; as this is as bad as not oiling at all. If the time comes when you have to have your equipment repaired, please visit your local hobby shop or contact us for help.
